Cypress Creek EMS: Building on Our Commitment to Your Future

On November 8, 2007 Cypress Creek EMS held a ground breaking for their new 6 acre complex. Scheduled to be completed in January of 2009, the complex will include administrative offices, the new Charles R. Hooks Education Center, the Communications Center, and an EMS Station. Having these departments at a centralized campus will provide the community easier access to all departments with a more effortless flow of information. In total, the buildings will be approximately 20,000 square feet; filled with a membership dedicated to saving lives and preventing injuries. The new Communications Center will house consoles for up to fourteen 9-1-1 dispatchers. The updated facility will provide dispatchers with the latest technological advances required to meet the growing needs of the community. The new Education Center will allow for larger classes, greater flexibility in classroom configuration, and an exciting new technology-based skills lab. Students and the community will both benefit from an extended scope of educational opportunities. In addition, the new EMS Station located in the complex will provide additional 9-1-1 coverage in an area with an already demanding call volume.

As our community continues to grow, we are planning to meet the needs of our community. The new complex will allow us to do just that. From a small volunteer EMS service 30 years ago, the leadership of our Board of Directors, combined with our dedicated staff and volunteers, has continued to provide cutting edge, innovative emergency medical care to those we serve. The strong relationship between Cypress Creek EMS and the ESD-11 Board of Directors plans to ensure that today, tomorrow, and ten years from now, that we are building on a foundation of excellence.
